Future Market Scope

What will the logistics marketplace look like in five to ten years? That's still a very open question. The future scenarios involve combinations of below four factors, weighted according to how important specific trends become:

- 1. Sharing the PI (e): The growth of collaborative working allows the current market leaders to retain their dominance. This could for example see a greater use of 'Physical Internet' (or 'PI') solutions, based on a move towards more standardised shipment sizes, labelling and systems.
- 2. Start-up, shake up: New entrants in the form of startups may make a bigger impact. The most challenging and costly last mile of delivery, in particular, becomes more fragmented, exploiting new technologies like platform and crowd-sharing solutions. These start-ups collaborate with incumbents and complement their service offers.
- 3. Complex competition: The competitive set may evolve in a different direction, as large industrial or retail customers and suppliers become players in the logistics market themselves, not just managing their own logistics but turning that expertise into a profitable business model.
- 4. Scale matters: As the current market leaders compete for a dominant market position by acquiring smaller players, achieving scale through consolidation, and innovation through the acquisition of smaller entrepreneurial start-ups will be a major factor in deciding who reaches the perceived end of the race.
